“ One year at Bristol NHRA Joey and the drag race crew were at the track watching top fuel and when the race was over everyone rushed out to get back to camp. Joey had bad feet after trying to fly off of his roof (another story) so he hated to walk back to camp, one of the other guys was carrying the heavy cooler and lagged behind. Joey got back to camp way earlier than anyone else by begging some pretty lady with a golf cart to take him down the hill and she brought him all the way to camp. When ask where the other guys were he said they were to slow to catch a ride on the cart and it was every man for himself when it came to walking. He was grinning ear to ear as the others came into camp one by one. He always enjoyed rubbing it in about his ability to convince a pretty lady that wasn't supposed to take riders from the track, to deliver him home with a smile. You will be missed my friend.
